

WAIVER ADDS WEEK 12

11/24/2020

These five players should be targeted in most 12 team leagues and are currently rostered in less than 40% of Yahoo leagues.

JALEN REAGOR - PHI (9)

It's becoming difficult to continue seeing him struggle because of his QB, but the role is there, and the matchup against SEA is appealing. He has been the best WR on the team over the past couple of weeks, despite being injured earlier. Ertz's return does make me think his target share will drop, but not enough to make him droppable. If anything, he's a solid spot start if you're looking for a WR3/Flex.

GUS EDWARDS - BAL (7)

With Dobbins and Ingram already ruled out, this opens up an enormous opportunity for Edwards to finish as a top 20 RB this week. Sure, the matchup isn't great against PIT, but having the threat of Lamar Jackson will help open up lanes. I'm not passing on 15-20 touches at this point of the season where every game matters if you're in the playoff hunt.

STERLING SHEPARD - NYG (11)

At 43% rostered, he's technically not qualified, but I think it needs to be said. Since returning from injury, he has averaged eight targets over the past month. That level of consistency is helpful in PPR leagues. Facing CIN this week, the matchup doesn't scare me. They may not need to throw as much this game, but a few catches for 30-60 yards is a nice floor.

JAMES WHITE - NE (5)

As a White fan, this upsets me because I dropped him weeks ago. With Burkhead's injury, White is the pass-catching back and will get more opportunities. Facing AZ, there's some upside since they will need to keep up with that offense, but I'm okay with waiting one more week. I'm not starting him every week, but he's a PPR option worth picking up in the right matchups.

NELSON AGHOLOR - LV (6)

I know he had good games this season, but I wasn't sure if it would continue when Ruggs returns from his injury. At this point, I think we can say he will continue to be a boom or bust option depending on the flow of the game. If you believe LV will need to pass to win the game, Agholor becomes a spot start because he is Carr's favorite WR option.

