

WEEK 8 WAIVERS

LOOKING FOR PLAYERS ON LESS THAN 45% OF ROSTERS IN YAHOO

1

KENNETH GAINWELL - RB (PHI) - WK 14 BYE

With Miles Sanders injured, this opens up an opportunity for the pass-catching rookie to expand his role as a runner. Finished with 61 total yards and a TD on nine touches last week, he can be a flex option with matchups against DET and LAC. Despite Boston Scott getting some carries, I'm more optimistic on Gainwell since he was getting touches all season long, but I expect this committee to remain.

2

ALLEN LAZARD - WR (GB) - WK 13 BYE

Coming off back-to-back games of scoring a TD on at least five targets, Lazard has shown to be a capable secondary receiver. With Davante Adams on the COVID list, he is likely to miss a game or two, which may boost Lazard's target share and make him a fantasy-relevant bye week filler. With matchups against AZ and KC upcoming, those are some decent matchups with a favorable game script.

KALIF RAYMOND - WR (DET) - WK 9 BYE

This one is a little out there since he's not really known, but he has quietly been a WR3/flex option in PPR leagues. Finishing with at least six catches in three of the past five games, he has shown to be an intriguing bye week filler. There's definitely some risk since he's on a DET offense that will limit his scoring upside, but he seems to have found a role and that could be useful in desperate times.

4

SAMAJE PERINE - RB (CIN) - WK 10 BYE

This recommendation is a speculative add. With Joe Mixon battling through injury during the season, Perine has filled in and looked solid and is likely the handcuff if Mixon misses time. Finishing with over 50 yards on double-digit carries used on the goal-line, he can be fantasy-relevant. However, unless you're a Mixon owner, I won't target him over the above options as he's currently just a bench stash.
