

WEEK 3 WAIVERS

LOOKING FOR PLAYERS ON LESS THAN 50% OF ROSTERS IN YAHOO

1

JEROME FORD (RB) - CLE (5)

After avoiding the BAL backfield last week, I don't promote any RB with double-digit touches as a pick-up. However, this is more confirmation that he's one of the top waiver priorities with the potential to be a league winner. If you're not aware, this team let Kareem Hunt go because they felt Ford was sufficient, and now, with the lead role, he instantly becomes an RB2 with upside. They may bring someone in, but it's his role to lose.

2

TUTU ATWELL (WR) - LAR (10)

If you missed out last week, this is your chance for redemption. I was surprised to see Atwell still available in so many leagues. I understand the concern when Kupp comes back. However, Atwell has surpassed 75 yards on at least eight targets in consecutive games. For the next two or three games, I consider Atwell WR3 material as he's the second option behind Puka Nacua and may have a role when Kupp returns.

TANK DELL (WR) - HOU (7)

Finishing with seven catches and 72 yards on ten targets is a good sign for a rookie WR this early in the season. He's battling for targets as one of the top three receiving threats for HOU, and I don't expect Robert Woods to be the consistent second option behind Nico Collins for the rest of the season. In PPR formats, you can stash Dell at the end of the bench as a WR5 with WR3 upside at the end of the season.

TYJAE SPEARS (RB) - TEN (7)

With all the injuries to the RB position, it's easy to pick up every backup and say they're RB2s. However, instead of Matt Breida (Saquon) or Craig Reynolds (Montgomery), here's someone who's not worth starting but is an elite handcuff option. Over the past two weeks, he's been consistently involved in the offense (8 touches last week), and I expect his role to grow gradually; he is a must-roster for any team with Derrick Henry.
