

WEEK 8 DEF STREAMERS

LOOKING FOR TEAMS ON LESS THAN 60% OF ROSTERS IN YAHOO

1

HOUSTON TEXANS @ CAR

After coming out of a bye week, they have been a league-average defense in fantasy football, forcing multiple turnovers in three of the last four games. They will face a CAR offense that's bottom ten in total yards and points per game. There isn't too much upside since CAR is league average in turnovers, but HOU has been a top-12 defense in forcing turnovers, so maybe they can get lucky with a top-ten performance. However, the matchup makes me more confident in the floor of around four to six points.

2

LOS ANGELES CHARGERS VS CHI

They haven't been considered a good defense, but they have a great matchup against a beat-up CHI offense that's within the bottom six in turnovers. Despite a tough matchup against KC the week before, they have looked better over the previous three weeks, generating at least four sacks and forcing multiple turnovers while holding their opponent to 20 points in two games. Because of the matchup, I'm considering them a top-ten streaming option, and they face the NYJ, which isn't a bad option either.

3

JACKSONVILLE JAGUARS @ PIT

I tried to avoid listing the same team in back-to-back weeks, but the matchup is too good. To make this interesting, I'll focus on the matchup. PIT is a bottom-three offense in yards and points per game. They also don't have too many turnovers, but they'll be facing a top-five team in forcing turnovers, so I'm betting they'll continue their streak of forcing multiple turnovers (Weeks 4-6). I should mention that there are risks with the return of Diontae Johnson, but not enough to avoid them.

4

TENNESSEE TITANS VS ATL

This one is a last-resort option. This defense hasn't looked good over the past month, but I think the matchup helps this defense, and they could finish within the top 12. Facing a run-heavy ATL offense, this is an opportunity for the above-average run defense to bounce back after some mediocre performances over the past two weeks. Generating a sack and one turnover in three of the previous four games isn't great, but it shows that they can be dangerous if they can make the ATL offense one-dimensional.

FOLLOW US @AKAMAIFANTASY

WWW.AKAIMAIFANTASYFOOTBALL.COM