

WEEK 11 WAIVERS

LOOKING FOR PLAYERS ON LESS THAN 50% OF ROSTERS IN YAHOO

1

CHRISTIAN WATSON - WR (GB)

This may be a flash-in-the-pan moment where he may never get close to this again for the rest of the year. He has been wildly inconsistent and has missed time due to injuries. While he was impressive last week and should be on the radar, it's hard to pick him up if you need an immediate WR/flex option. There's not much reason to think this GB offense will revert to a top-10 offense, so you're looking at a volatile WR4 competing for targets.

ISIAH PACHECO - RB (KC)

We heard the announcement that Isaiah Pacheco was the starting RB a couple of weeks ago, but we weren't sure what to expect from an RBBC within a pass-heavy offense. Last week he dominated the rushing attempts, with Jerick McKinnon taking the passing work. I don't expect Clyde Edwards-Helaire to be completely phased out like last week, but we saw a sign of what the lead RB can look like in KC. He's a mid-tier RB3 with a low floor.

GUS EDWARDS - RB (BAL)

While he only played two games this season, he did look impressive and finished with double-digit rushing attempts as one of the lead RBs. With J.K. Dobbins injured, Edwards would likely jump into the lead role with Lamar Jackson and absorb all the touches from Kenyan Drake and Justice Hill. If you need an RB3 in standard-scoring leagues with some upside as he's a red-zone threat, then he's an immediate stash in the chance that Dobbins misses the rest of the season.

JUWAN JOHNSON - TE (NO)

If I told you he was a top-12 TE in half PPR scoring, would you believe me? He's been on a hot streak, scoring four touchdowns in three of the past four games. He's had at least five targets in three of the past five games. He's a volatile streaming option that you're hoping scores a touchdown. He led the team in targets last week and could be a sneaky streaming option with how difficult the TE position has been.
