

WEEK 11 WAIVERS

LOOKING FOR PLAYERS ON LESS THAN 45% OF ROSTERS IN YAHOO

1

TYLER CONKLIN - TE (MIN) - WK 7 BYE

As a top 12 TE, he's been a consistent week-to-week option recently with at least five targets in four consecutive games. He's also putting the targets to use with at least 45 yards or a TD in those four games. I believe Conklin can provide streaming value as a flex option or fill in for a bye week as an emergency option with all the injuries. If you're looking for a solid streamer, then I would consider adding him.

2

DAN ARNOLD - TE (JAX) - WK 7 BYE

Despite being on a subpar offense, he has carved out a nice role within the offense with at least seven targets in four of the past five games. During those games, he finished with over 60 receiving yards. While he lacks the TD upside being on the struggling JAX offense, his targets within the offense provide a solid bye week filler or flex option in PPR or TE premium scoring leagues.

3

DEONTE HARRIS - WR (NO) - WK 6 BYE

With at least seven targets out of two of the past three games, Harris has been a serviceable boom or bust flex option with at least 50 receiving yards in five games this season. Currently third on the team in targets, the injury to Kamara (leads team in targets) will open up more opportunities for more targets. Marquez Callaway is also intriguing; however, I feel that Harris has a higher floor.

4

RHAMONDRE STEVENSON- RB (NE) - WK 14 BYE

With the injury to Damien Harris, Stevenson was impressive, finishing with 100 yards and two TDs on 20 carries against a good CLE defense. While we don't know if Harris will return next week, the potential for more carries within the offense is likely, even with Harris returns. Until then, he's an RB3 with upside. Stevenson may be a high-end handcuff, but against good matchups could provide flex value.
