

WEEK 15 WAIVERS

LOOKING FOR PLAYERS ON LESS THAN 50% OF ROSTERS IN YAHOO

1

ODELL BECKHAM JR (WR) - BAL

I might be a little late, but after double-digit targets last week, he's proven to be one of the primary receiving threats within the offense. Over the past five games, he's surpassed 50 receiving yards on at least seven targets in three of the last five games. He's sharing targets with Zay Flowers and Isaiah Likely, so he's not more than a TD-dependent flex option, but he has WR3 upside. He's also scored three touchdowns and will have opportunities throughout the season, which is worth rostering.

2

DONTA FOREMAN (RB) - CHI

Coming out of the bye week after missing the previous game, his role within the offense was questioned, and he returned as the lead rushing option with double-digit rush attempts. As the lead option, he finished with over 50 rushing yards in three of the last four games and scored a touchdown twice. Unfortunately, he split snaps with two other players last week, and that will limit his upside as a boom-or-bust flex/RB3 option in standard-scoring leagues.

3

ZAMIR WHITE (RB) - LV

With the injury to Josh Jacobs, we are likely looking at a committee of some sort. The question becomes, do you start a player who's reliant on goal-line touches, or is a receiving threat during the passing downs? Abdullah did finish with more touches last week, and being a receiving threat is beneficial in PPR leagues. However, there are too many question marks on this offense for either player to be more than a speculative bench spot to see if one of them can be productive on a weekly basis.

4

JAKE BROWNING (QB) - CIN

With all the injuries to the QB position, you may need someone to stream or start as a QB2 in super-flex leagues, then he would be my first choice. Over the past two games, he has looked impressive with over 250 passing yards and two touchdowns. He has a decent matchup against MIN next week and has top-12 upside due to the talent on offense. I don't know if I can start him in single QB leagues, but he's worth considering if you have someone else on a bad matchup or is questionable to play.

FOLLOW US @AKAMAIFANTASY

WWW.AKAMAIFANTASYFOOTBALL.COM