

WEEK 12 WAIVERS

LOOKING FOR PLAYERS ON LESS THAN 50% OF ROSTERS IN YAHOO

1

ZACH CHARBONNET (RB) - SEA (5)

With the injury to Walker, this opens up an opportunity for the rookie to finish with double-digit carries for the second time. While he wasn't impressive, his usage as a receiving threat, hopefully will continue ahead. The upcoming matchups against SF and DAL are tough, but in Week 12, there's not much higher upside than a three-down RB, averaging nearly 20 touches a game. He may not be a league-winner, but he's easily the best option this week and potentially for the rest of the season.

2

JAYDEN REED (WR) - GB (6)

I mentioned him before, but after a few impressive performances, seeing he still fits my criteria is surprising. He's surpassed 80 all-purpose yards in three of his last four games and scored two touchdowns in that span. He does lack volume in targets and is somewhat of a boom-or-bust option; however, his big play ability makes him a flex option in most leagues. His usage as a rusher is promising, and the team is manufacturing touches for him, which gives me confidence in rostering him.

3

JOSHUA PALMER (WR) - LAC (5)

While he won't provide immediate help for Week 12, this offense severely lacks a secondary receiving threat behind Keenan Allen and will be that once he returns. Before he was injured, he had at least 60 receiving yards on seven targets in four of the last five games. The earliest he can return is Week 13, and he's a sneaky stash to add to the end of your bench as a potential WR3. It's not confirmed that he will return next week, but there aren't many options with more weekly upside available on the waiver wire.

4

TUTU ATWELL (WR) - LAR (10)

With the injury to Cooper Kupp, there could be a potential opportunity for him to return to the WR3 value he had in the first half of the season. He had at least eight targets in the games Kupp missed, surpassing 50 yards in three of those four games. While his role diminished with Kupp's return, he was still a redzone target and had an opportunity last week but didn't make the catch. While his role is tentative on Kupp's health, he's still worth taking a shot on as a desperation flex option.

FOLLOW US @AKAMAIFANTASY

WWW.AKAMAIFANTASYFOOTBALL.COM