

WEEK 6 QB STREAMERS

LOOKING FOR PLAYERS ON LESS THAN 70% OF ROSTERS IN YAHOO

1

KIRK COUSINS (ATL) @ CAR

After his historic performance last week, streaming him against a vulnerable CAR defense that is missing a few key players seems like a no-brainer. Well it is. Obviously, I'm not saying Cousins will finish in the top five and may regress to what we've seen in earlier weeks, hovering around 240 passing yards and one or two touchdowns. But because of the matchup, I'm willing to bet he will finish with two touchdowns, making him a top-12 option and one of the safer streaming options.

2

DANIEL JONES (NYG) VS CIN

Honestly, I'm not quite confident in him as a streaming option despite performing well in three of his last four games, throwing at least two touchdowns and rushing at least 20 yards with zero turnovers. Last week's performance without Malik Nabers was impressive, and I cannot deny that he has shown enough to be a last-resort streaming option this week against a beatable CIN defense that has given up at least 200 passing yards and two touchdowns in three straight games.

3

JUSTIN FIELDS (PIT) @ LV

It's a mixed bag of a performance last week, finishing with two touchdowns despite not even reaching 150 passing yards and 30 rushing yards. The reason is because of the matchup against a vulnerable LV defense that just gave up a season-high 34 points to a rookie QB and 36 points to an improved but still below-average CAR offense. He has also performed well in fantasy over the past three weeks and is currently a top-12 quarterback, making him another solid streaming option.

4

CALEB WILLIAMS (CHI) VS JAX

Despite a rough start to the season, he has bounced back well with some strong performances surpassing 300 yards and throwing two touchdowns in two of his last three games. While I'm not certain he will continue at this pace, but the recent flashes along with the matchup against a JAX defense that has given up at least 250 yards and two touchdowns in three straight games. Williams is close to being rostered in most leagues, and at this point, he should be as a low-end QB1 with upside.

FOLLOW US @AKAMAIFANTASY

WWW.AKAMAIFANTASYFOOTBALL.COM