

WEEK 8 DEF STREAMERS

LOOKING FOR TEAMS ON LESS THAN 60% OF ROSTERS IN YAHOO

INDIANAPOLIS COLTS VS TEN

Let me get the obvious out of the way here. Against the worst offense in the league in yards and points per game, this defense will continue its trend over the last five games of generating multiple sacks and forcing a turnover. Over the last three games, this IND defense has forced multiple turnovers in two of them. This TEN offense has failed to score 20 points in three of its previous four games and has not reached 24 points once this season. Despite being divisional rivals, this is the top streaming option available.

HOUSTON TEXANS VS SF

Despite the tough matchup last week, this defense has continued to be impressive as they have generated a sack and forced a turnover in four straight games while leading the league in points allowed per game. They have also held their opponents to under 20 points in three of their last four games and are facing an SF offense that's in the bottom ten of points scored and rushing yards per game. It's not a great matchup, but I like this defense to be a solid top-15 streaming option with top ten upside.

BUFFALO BILLS @ CAR

With the injury to Bryce Young, this is a great matchup for a BUF defense that's generated multiple sacks and forced a turnover in four games this season. While they have given up over 20 points in three of their last four games and have not been great due to injuries, they are facing a bottom-12 offense in giveaways. I like this defense's upside to force multiple turnovers, even if they give up some points, making them a decent top-15 option with a higher floor than a couple of the other names listed.

CINCINNATI BENGALS VS NYJ

Sometimes in fantasy football, you just need to be a little crazy. I could've pivoted to LAC's defense against a beatable MIN offense, but I think the NYJ currently has one of the worst offenses, failing to score 14 points and reaching 250 total yards in their last two games. Regardless of who's the starting QB for NYJ, I'm optimistic that this defense will have its rare top-15 performance, despite giving up more than 24 points in all but one game this season. Certainly a boom-or-bust option, but with upside?
