

WEEK 6 DEF STREAMERS

LOOKING FOR TEAMS ON LESS THAN 60% OF ROSTERS IN YAHOO

1

LOS ANGELES CHARGERS VS DEN

This is a bet against the injured Russell Wilson, who has struggled with the entire DEN offense. Failing to score two touchdowns in two of the past three games, they haven't scored more than 24 points this season. While I'm not confident in LAC, this is a decent matchup, as they have flashed the potential of a top-12 defense but remain inconsistent.

INDIANAPOLIS COLTS VS JAX

Coming off their best performance of the season, they have generated at least three sacks (3/5 games) and forced multiple turnovers in two of the past three games. Facing a bottom-12 offense in turnovers, this could be a surprise top-12 performance as this defense is in the top ten in rushing yards per game and points per game. I'm not rushing to pick them up, but it's not a bad matchup.

CINCINNATI BENGALS @ NO

With three of their starting WRs injured, along with their starting QB, this could be a solid matchup against a CIN defense that held teams to score 20 points or less every game this season. They're also in the top ten for points per game and rushing yards allowed. They forced a turnover over the last four games against the offense with the most turnovers in the league. If a couple of players return, I may decide to pivot to another defense.

CHICAGO BEARS VS WAS

CHI's defense has consistently generated a sack and a turnover every game this season. With two turnovers out of two of the past three games, they're facing an offense with an injured QB who had a turnover in back-to-back games. CHI's defense is top ten in takeaways against the bottom half of the league in turnovers. There's some upside, but it's risky.
