

WEEK 1 DEF STREAMERS

LOOKING FOR TEAMS ON LESS THAN 60% OF ROSTERS IN YAHOO

1

TAMPA BAY BUCCANEERS VS CHI

Facing a decent MIN offense, they were able to force three turnovers and a couple of sacks despite giving up big plays. Now they're facing a CHI offense that looked awful with a couple of turnovers, and I can envision a similar performance from this defense. They are one of the safer options if I need six to nine points, and I would consider them with one of the higher floors on matchup alone.

GREEN BAY PACKERS @ ATL

Despite the win against CAR, I was not impressed with the ATL one-dimensional offense. While they finished in the top five last week, they face a better offense and will likely not reach double-digits again. Despite that, I think they'll be cheaper to roster than some of the other names listed, and it is a secondary option that can finish in the 10-12 range and not lose you a week. I also think they have a higher floor than some of the other listed options.

INDIANAPOLIS COLTS @ HOU

While they weren't impressive last week against JAX, giving up 31 points, I like their matchup against HOU. Forcing multiple turnovers and sacks against a decent offense, they now face a rookie QB likely to struggle against a better defense. I wouldn't expect them to finish in the top ten, but they have the potential if they can force a couple of turnovers and have the upside to reach the top five.

CLEVELAND BROWNS @ PIT

After shutting down an elite offense like CIN, they are one of the priority pickups as they get to face a PIT offense that got destroyed by SF. I don't believe they have the same defense as SF, and PIT will be better, so the upside isn't as high. They are not my favorite option, but I'm confident this is a good matchup, and they will have opportunities to finish with double-digit points.
