

WEEK 10 WAIVERS

LOOKING FOR PLAYERS ON LESS THAN 50% OF ROSTERS IN YAHOO

1

HUNTER HENRY (TE) - NE (14)

Rookie QB Drake Maye has played well enough despite the struggling NE offense to boost his top receiving targets as fantasy-relevant players. Henry is a top ten TE in half PPR leagues and is a solid streaming option that has surpassed 40 receiving yards and is averaging seven targets over the past four games. As long as Maye is the starter, he's a weekly low-end starter that will get you a handful of points with the occasional touchdown, which makes him a top waiver priority for TE.

2

RICKY PEARSALL (WR) - SF (9)

With the bye week and the potential return of CMC, people may be sleeping on the potential flex option in Ricky Pearsall with his expanded role with Brandon Aiyuk's season over. While he only had nine targets in his last two games, I expect him to gradually be more involved in the offense and become a low-end WR3 with upside due to the SF offense. Of course, he will be the third option at best and will compete for targets with Jauan Jennings, making him more of a potential stash.

3

MIKE GESICKI (TE) - CIN (12)

While he has looked great over the past two weeks, he will not remain a streaming option once Tee Higgins returns. But with the uncertainty of when that will be, he may end up a top 12 TE for the next couple of weeks and is a great bye-week fill-in even as a flex in PPR scoring leagues. However, he lacks the floor and can be forgotten entirely in the offense, so I wouldn't be investing much into him as a consolation prize if I miss out on the top waiver options.

4

XAVIER LEGETTE (WR) - CAR (11)

He has put together a couple of solid performances that have been carried by scoring a touchdown on mediocre volume. However, he is the primary receiving target if Adam Thelien remains injured or gets traded in the next week. Due to the mediocre volume, I wouldn't be picking him up to start him immediately. Instead, I would stash him on my bench, and if he starts approaching double-digit targets, then he becomes a solid WR3 in PPR scoring leagues.

FOLLOW US @AKAMAIFANTASY

WWW.AKAMAIFANTASYFOOTBALL.COM