

WEEK 15 DEF STREAMERS

LOOKING FOR TEAMS ON LESS THAN 55% OF ROSTERS IN YAHOO

1

MIAMI DOLPHINS VS NYJ

With three out of their past five games with at least four sacks and more than one turnover, they have recently been one of the hottest defenses. They have also held their opponents to under 20 points in each of those five games. Facing a turnover-prone NYJ offense, this is a great matchup to take advantage of. One of the top streaming targets due to the high upside.

2

PHILADELPHIA EAGLES VS WAS

Facing a WAS offense with three consecutive games of one INT, they will look to capitalize on a decent matchup. Generating a sack and holding their opponents to under 20 points in three of the past four games, they will look to continue that trend of slowing down an already depleted WAS offense. There's some risk, but I consider it a safe bet for a handful of points with the upside for a couple more.

3

CLEVELAND BROWNS VS LV

This is more about the matchup rather than the defense itself. The CLE defense has been solid, with at least two sacks in eight consecutive games and holding their opponents to under 20 points in four out of the last five performances. They're facing an LV offense that failed to score over 20 points in five out of the past six games. If I miss out on one of the top streaming options, not a bad consolation prize.

4

MINNESOTA VIKINGS @ CHI

If BUF QB Josh Allen is hurt, you can start the CAR defense. However, I think Allen plays. However, this MIN defense has a difficult but juicy matchup against a CHI offense that gave up a pick-six last week. The defense has generated more than one sack and a turnover in three consecutive games, there's some upside against the rookie QB, but the inconsistencies make this a last resort option,
