

WEEK 8 DEF STREAMERS

LOOKING FOR TEAMS ON LESS THAN 60% OF ROSTERS IN YAHOO

1

INDIANAPOLIS COLTS VS WAS

Over the past three games, this defense has been impressive, generating multiple sacks and turnovers. They allowed less than 14 points in two games within that span, facing a bottom-five offense in sacks allowed, and gave up a touchdown off a turnover last week. Despite the change in starting QB for both teams, I'm still optimistic that this is a streaming candidate in the top ten in rush yards allowed per carry and generates pressure throughout the game.

ATLANTA FALCONS VS CAR

Sometimes you need to swing for the fences. Despite being a below-average defense, they have put up some good performances before. Facing an offense that played okay last week, I don't expect them to repeat that performance against an ATL defense that held better offenses to 21 points or less in three of the previous four games. A boom-or-bust option.

JACKSONVILLE JAGUARS VS DEN

Despite this being a London game, I'm betting on the defense taking advantage of a lousy offense regardless of who's been at QB. Of course, this defense has looked awful over the past three games, so this is not my first or second option. JAX has a solid run defense despite last week's performance, and I think this is a low-upside but safe bet for 4-6 points to get you by.

TENNESEE TITANS @ HOU

After finishing a top-12 defense last week, I'm continuing to start them against a below-average HOU offense that has scored 21+ points only once this season. Over the past three games, they have generated three sacks and forced three turnovers in two of those games. This isn't my favorite matchup, but not a bad option if you already have them.
