

WEEK 7 DEF STREAMERS

LOOKING FOR TEAMS ON LESS THAN 55% OF ROSTERS IN YAHOO

1

CAROLINA PANTHERS @ NYG

After starting the season undefeated, they have lost three straight games. However, this defense has proven itself a legitimate pass-rushing threat with multiple sacks in four games this season. Coming off back-to-back games with a turnover, facing an NYG offense that threw three INTs to a strong LAR defense, there's some upside for this defense, creating a decent spot start opportunity.

MIAMI DOLPHINS VS ATL

While this defense wasn't impressive against JAX last week, they did generate sacks in every game this season. They also created a turnover in two of their three past games. Facing an ATL offense off of a bye week, I'm not expecting multiple turnovers or five sacks; instead, I don't see this game getting out of hand, and this is a relatively safe play for a few points if you're in a tough spot and can't afford a zero.

NEW ORLEANS SAINTS @ SEA

Fresh off a bye week, facing a SEA offense without Russell Wilson and Chris Carson, this is a fortunate situation for this defense with an INT in every game this season and more than one sack in four games. SEA gave up five sacks last week to PIT, so I'm anticipating a couple this week. This defense is one of the preferred streaming options this week since they have one of the highest floors and some upside.

4

LAS VEGAS RAIDERS VS PHI

Coming off their best game of the season, they'll be facing a PHI offense that is coming off back-to-back games, giving up two sacks and one INT. This defense has gotten two sacks or more in each game this season; Lane Johnson's return will help PHI, but not enough to have me avoid this matchup. I don't anticipate more than a handful of points with the potential for more if they create a turnover or two.
