

WEEK 11 WAIVERS

LOOKING FOR PLAYERS ON LESS THAN 50% OF ROSTERS IN YAHOO

1

TY CHANDLER (RB) - MIN (13)

With Alexander Mattison dealing with a concussion, this opens up a starting opportunity. While he wasn't impressive with his 15 touches, he'll have a better matchup against DEN. It's not guaranteed that Mattison will miss this week, I wouldn't spend a ton of FAAB on Chandler. However, to get a possible starting RB with no real competition is too much upside for me not to take a shot with him if he ends up starting this week. Even if Mattison returns, he may still be involved weekly as a speculative add.

2

NOAH BROWN (WR) - HOU (7)

I didn't believe in him initially, and I missed out on an excellent performance. Even if Collins returns from injury, I think he'll be productive even though he won't be putting up 100-yard games. I also wouldn't be starting him beyond a low-end flex option in PPR leagues, as I don't see him being higher than the 3rd option if everyone is healthy. However, if Collins misses more games, the upside is too much not to consider him a flex option against a mediocre AZ defense.

3

RASHID SHAHEED (WR) - NO (11)

Now, this isn't too appealing if you need immediate help. Still, the injury to Michael Thomas appears to be a multi-week issue, and regardless of who the QB is, the explosive big-play ability of Shaheed will now have more opportunities to become a consistent weekly option. Sure, he wasn't impressive last week, but nine targets were promising, and he gets to face ATL after the bye week. Of course, he's still a boom-or-bust type of player, but if he can get six to seven targets a game, I'll start him in PPR leagues.

4

DEMARIO DOUGLAS (WR) - NE (11)

It feels like a cop-out to mention him again, but he's the bonafide top-receiving threat on this miserable offense. He's had at least six targets in the last four games and surpassed 50 receiving yards in three of those games. Even if Devante Parker returns, Douglas is a solid WR4/flex option in PPR scoring formats that can fill in as a bye week/injury spot start. Unfortunately, his ceiling isn't high due to this offense, but if he's still available and you need some WR depth, I would pick him up since there's no consistent competition for targets.

FOLLOW US @AKAMAIFANTASY

WWW.AKAMAIFANTASYFOOTBALL.COM