

WEEK 7 WAIVERS

LOOKING FOR PLAYERS ON LESS THAN 50% OF ROSTERS IN YAHOO

1

ELIJAH MITCHELL/JORDAN MASON (RB) - SF (9)

With CMC anticipated to be out for a couple of games, if not more, this means that there's a huge opportunity for one of these guys to become the lead option. However, both names are listed because it will likely not be just one guy absorbing 20+ carries. In the past, Elijah Mitchell has been the primary backup, but he's recovering from an injury, so Jordan Mason looked solid last week with the majority of touches. If I had to pick one, I would lean towards Mitchell, but Mason is the better option for next week.

2

ZACH EVANS (RB) - LAR (10)

Another backfield plagued with injuries, and this isn't quite as appealing as SF's situation since Kyren Williams isn't expected to miss much time. However, backup Ronnie Rivers is out for a few games, and this means we have a rookie RB with the opportunity to start for at least one week with the potential for more if Williams needs another week. Facing PIT and DAL concerns me, so I'm not spending 20% of my FAAB on Evans. But with bye weeks and injuries, this has RB3 potential and is worth a shot.

3

JONNU SMITH (TE) - ATL (11)

I may be late, but he has been a solid TE streaming option over the past month, averaging around six targets and surpassing 60 receiving yards in two of the past three games. It's hard to feel confident when he's sharing snaps with Kyle Pitts, but over the last four games, they both surpassed 25 targets, which means they can coexist in this offense. With matchups against TB, TEN, and MIN, Smith is a solid bye-week fill-in or a desperation flex option if you're struggling with injuries.

4

CURTIS SAMUEL (WR) - WAS (14)

It's pretty wild that a top-30 WR is available in more than half of Yahoo leagues, especially in full PPR. He has competed for the secondary receiving threat with Jahan Dotson (both have 31 targets) and has looked solid, surpassing 50 receiving yards in four of the last six games. While it remains to be seen if he will keep it up, why not pick him up as your WR4/flex option when you have bye weeks and injuries? At this point, it's worth taking a shot on a guy with a role in this offense facing a below-average NYG defense.

FOLLOW US @AKAMAIFANTASY

WWW.AKAMAIFANTASYFOOTBALL.COM