

WEEK 12 WAIVERS

LOOKING FOR PLAYERS ON LESS THAN 45% OF ROSTERS IN YAHOO

1

JAMISON CROWDER- WR (NYJ) - WK 6 BYE

Did you miss out on Elijah Moore? Crowder has been a solid secondary option averaging more than six targets a game over the past five games with the QB carousel of the NYJ. That's not a large volume of targets, but it's consistent. In PPR scoring formats, he is considered a bye-week filler, spot start against a good matchup. I will keep him as a bench stash, for now, to see if his targets grow.

LATAVIUS MURRAY - RB (BAL) - WK 8 BYE

If Devonta Freeman is available, I would consider him first as he's been the lead back for the past few weeks. However, now finally healthy, Murray may be on the wrong side of this committee but has been seeing at least nine carries in five of the seven games this season. While that is not enough to start him, he's an injury from taking over lead back duties and becoming a flex option—an interesting speculative add.

KENDRICK BOURNE - WR (NE) - WK 14 BYE

Coming off an okay performance against ATL, he has been a boom or bust option throughout the season with at least 75 yards and a TD in three games this season. He also has six games with under 50 yards and no TDs. The only reason he's on this list is that he has seen consistent targets with at least four over the past five games. While that volume is unimpressive, he is a speculative add in deeper leagues.

MARQUEZ VALDES-SCANTLING- WR (GB) - WK 13 BYE

This recommendation is purely another speculative add based on the ten targets he saw last week, which he converted into 123 yards and a TD. I don't expect him to have another game like this, but if he continues to see more than a handful of targets, he may end up a boom or bust flex option that can win you a week against the right matchups.
