

WEEK 12 DEF STREAMERS

LOOKING FOR TEAMS ON LESS THAN 55% OF ROSTERS IN YAHOO

1

PHILADELPHIA EAGLES @ NYG

They've been on a roll over the past four games, scoring a defensive TD in three of them. Facing an NYG offense that gave up three turnovers last week to TB, there's a decent chance they will continue this hot streak of creating turnovers and possibly scoring again. However, this defense has been inconsistent, so prepare for a broader range of outcomes than I'd typically prefer.

CHICAGO BEARS @ DET

This defense would be the immediate top target if it weren't for the injuries to Khalil Mack and Akiem Hicks, among others within this defense. However, the matchup is too good to pass up regardless of who the starting QB is for DET. Getting six sacks last week against BAL is impressive, and I would still consider them one of the safer options on this list. I'd also keep an eye on the injury report throughout the week,

WASHINGTON FOOTBALL TEAM VS SEA

Have you missed out on the above options? I'm not crazy about the matchup since SEA could wake up at any moment. However, this defense has held opponents to 21 points or less in three straight games, and Russell Wilson has looked awful since returning from injury. Therefore, I would consider this a last resort option since I can equally imagine a defense scenario with either a handful of points or zero.

LOS ANGELES CHARGERS @ DEN

Depending on the DEN injuries, this defense could be a sneaky spot start this week. However, if Bolles and/or Massie return, I would consider pivoting to another option with more upside. Generating a sack in every game this season, they would be able to take advantage of an injured offensive line and could be one of the boom or bust options that can win or lose you your week.
