

WEEK 17 WAIVERS

LOOKING FOR PLAYERS ON LESS THAN 45% OF ROSTERS IN YAHOO

1

DARE OGUNBOWALE - RB (JAX)

With the injuries to James Robinson and Carlos Hyde, Dare Ogunbowale has taken advantage of the opportunity looking decent last week with 57 yards and a TD on 17 carries. Facing a tough matchup against NE, he will not be someone I would use my top waiver priority unless I'm desperate for an RB with volume and TD upside. He's also a capable receiving back, so he should be game script proof.

2

BOSTON SCOTT - RB (PHI)

Splitting carries with Jordan Howard since Miles Sanders is injured, Scott has looked solid with the limited volume (41 yards and a TD on 12 carries). However, Howard got hurt near the end of the game, and he might miss this week's matchup against the subpar WAS defense. Therefore, this is more of a speculative add as I wouldn't start Scott unless Howard were to miss the game.

3

REX BURKHEAD - RB (HOU)

Ugh. I don't want to take too much away from his best performance of the season last week, finishing with over 140 yards and two TDs on 22 carries. I don't expect half of this production next week against a better run defense (SF). However, he has been the lead back and will be a TD dependant streaming option that feels like a bad idea until it isn't.

4

ISAIAH MCKENZIE - WR (BUF)

This recommendation is a speculative add meant to be stashed on your bench. McKenzie was excellent last week, filling in for Cole Beasley's slot receiver role within the offense. Facing a porous ATL defense, he will be a PPR flex option if Beasley were to miss this game. However, we're not sure that Beasley will miss the game, so I would make backup plans if I need someone off the waiver wire.
