

WEEK 4 WAIVERS

LOOKING FOR PLAYERS ON LESS THAN 50% OF ROSTERS IN YAHOO

1

MARQUEZ VALDES-SCANTLING - WR (KC)

This isn't some high upside WR2 that will be immediately starting. However, here is someone who leads the WRs in snaps and is only one target behind the leading WR (Juju Smith-Schuster). He hasn't been able to produce off the opportunities, but he's a weekly contributor whose role will increase if one of the other receivers gets injured. He's a volatile WR4 that you can grab without spending a ton.

TYLER CONKLIN - TE (NYJ)

He's currently a top ten TE in most leagues and is only rostered in less than 25% of leagues. He could regress as the season continues or when Zach Wilson is back. However, he has been the clear TE1 within the offense, and I believe he can be a weekly steaming option depending on the matchup. If you have one of the many underwhelming TEs, why not add Conklin and keep him if this is legitimate?

JAYLEN WARREN - RB (PIT)

While I don't expect Jaylen Warren to force a 50/50 committee with Najee Harris, the fact that he's involved this early in the season is a good sign for the rookie. He is a handcuff with the potential for standalone value. The limited offense keeps me cautiously optimistic as the opportunities aren't currently there. If you have a bench spot with your 6th WR or 2nd TE, he could be worth picking up for a couple of weeks.

MICHAEL GALLUP - WR (DAL)

If you missed the boat on Noah Brown, this is your chance to pick the guy who's expected to take on that role. I won't deny that there's a chance that Brown remains involved and prevents Michael Gallup from reaching WR3 status. Despite that, I'm willing to take my chance and see if he can become that WR3 by the second half of the season. I think the contract extension confirms the team believes he can as well.
