

WEEK 9 DEF STREAMERS

LOOKING FOR TEAMS ON LESS THAN 60% OF ROSTERS IN YAHOO

1

JACKSONVILLE JAGUARS @ LV

Coming out of the bye week, they had a couple of bad games against SEA and LAR, where they didn't force a turnover. However, the LV offense ranks in the bottom ten in passing and rushing yards, as well as points scored per game. Add the fact that they are also a bottom-five offense in turnovers, and this is a great matchup for a defense that forced multiple turnovers in its first four games and generated a sack in six of eight games. They are among my top streaming options, perhaps the best one.

2

LOS ANGELES RAMS VS NO

Another team out of the bye week, they're currently a top-10 defense, and I had them here multiple times because they have generated multiple sacks and forced a turnover in five games this season. They have also held their opponents to single digits in three games and have given up more than 21 points only twice. Now they face a NO offense that's in the bottom ten in points scored per game and turnovers, while benching their QB last week, and the backup wasn't much better. Easy top-12 streaming option.

3

SEATTLE SEAHAWKS @ WAS

This one is based on Jayden Daniels's injury; I wouldn't pivot from this if he returns, but it will lower the upside. Coming out of the bye week (see a trend?), they are another top-ten defense in fantasy and points allowed per game, and that's reflected in holding opponents to under 20 points in five games this season while generating a sack in every game. Considering how bad the WAS offense looked last week, if Daniels misses this game, I think this defense is another strong option with top-ten upside.

4

BALTIMORE RAVENS @ MIA

I know this sounds wild, but this defense has looked respectable over its last two games (which isn't much), and it has generated a sack and forced a turnover in each game. The impressive thing is that they held LAR and CHI to under 20 points. Against an MIA offense that's in the bottom ten of passing and rushing yards per game, along with turnovers, that's a good matchup with some upside despite the MIA offense looking good last week, making them a boom-or-bust top 15 streaming option.

FOLLOW US @AKAMAIFANTASY

WWW.AKAIMAIFANTASYFOOTBALL.COM