

WEEK 7 DEF STREAMERS

LOOKING FOR TEAMS ON LESS THAN 60% OF ROSTERS IN YAHOO

1

NEW YORK JETS @ DEN

This may seem like I'm just fading DEN's offense, but this is also because the NYJ defense has been impressive, particularly the past three weeks averaging three sacks and forcing multiple turnovers. They're in the top ten in yards per play, rushing yards per carry, passing yards per attempt, and forcing turnovers. While they're not a top-12 defense, they are a solid streaming option against an offense that scored more than 17 points once this season

2

ARIZONA CARDINALS VS NO

Facing an offense that may resort to their third-string quarterback and possibly be without their top three WRs, is a decent matchup for a defense that has held their opponents to under 21 points in the last four games. They also have forced multiple sacks and a turnover in two of their previous three games. This is not my first option, but it's a boom or bust opportunity to take on an injured offense in a short turnaround.

3

LAS VEGAS RAIDERS VS HOU

Coming off a bye week against a frustrating loss, I anticipate this defense to come out aggressive and continue to pressure the QB (back-to-back games with three sacks). They are in the top five in rushing yards allowed and rushing yards per attempt, so it comes down to Davis Mills to be able to keep the offense going, and I'm comfortable taking a chance on this defense as a last resort.

4

TENNESEE TITANS VS IND

Another defense coming off a bye week; they'll be facing an IND offense that was impressive last week but otherwise failed to score 21 points in a game this season. Generating three sacks and a turnover on back-to-back games, they have been solid against decent matchups (@IND & @WAS). Now returning home against a decent matchup, this is a sneak play that can get you a handful of points.

FOLLOW US @AKAMAIFANTASY

WWW.AKAMAIFANTASYFOOTBALL.COM