

WEEK 6 WAIVERS

LOOKING FOR PLAYERS ON LESS THAN 50% OF ROSTERS IN YAHOO

1

TYRONE TRACY JR (RB) - NYG (11)

I admit I didn't see this coming, considering Devin Singletary was the clear starting RB, but perhaps we will begin seeing a committee form? Finishing with over 125 yards on less than 20 carries is impressive, and it seems crazy to expect him not to be involved in the future with Singletary healthy. Because of that, I consider him worthy of your last bench spot as a speculative add, and he may be flex-worthy in a couple of weeks.

2

TANK BIGSBY (RB) - JAX (12)

I mentioned him as a potential stash after his impressive Week 1 performance. However, he then had a rough couple of weeks before flashing a little in Week 4 with his limited touches. If you were patient, then you still roster him, and he is one of the top waiver targets with the potential of increased touches in his new role. While the offense isn't great by any means, and he will lose targets to Etienne, Bigsby can be a potential RB2 if he becomes the lead back with double-digit touches.

3

JOSH DOWNS (WR) - IND (14)

Starting the season injured, I was unsure if he would be able to be involved in the offense, especially with rookie Adonai Mitchell. However, with 21 targets over the past two games, he has become the PPR WR3 that we all could use on our bench. The injuries to Jonathan Taylor and Anthony Richardson are also essential to note because they limit the overall passing volume of the offense. Downs is not a season-long option, but it is definitely solid for the next week or two as a spot start.

4

TYLER CONKLIN (TE) - NYJ (12)

With all the rightful hype about Tucker Kraft, another TE has been performing mediocrely, but mediocre is the new top-12 in the TE landscape. He's actually in the top 15 in PPR scoring formats and has had at least six targets in the past three games, with over 50 receiving yards in two of those games. Unfortunately, he hasn't scored a touchdown yet and will be competing for targets with Allen Lazard and Mike Williams, making him a streaming option at best but worth monitoring.

FOLLOW US @AKAMAIFANTASY

WWW.AKAMAIFANTASYFOOTBALL.COM