

WEEK 6 DEF STREAMERS

LOOKING FOR TEAMS ON LESS THAN 60% OF ROSTERS IN YAHOO

1

CINCINNATI BENGALS VS SEA

Despite them being on here, I'm not saying this is a good defense, but they force turnovers, and that is half the battle. The problem is that SEA leads the league in turnovers with only one this season. However, this defense has generated three or more sacks in all but one game this season, and if they can pressure SEA, they should force some opportunities. This is a pure upside play but be prepared for two to four points if they can't capitalize.

2

JACKSONVILLE JAGUARS @ VS IND

After dominating ATL, they played well against a dangerous BUF offense. Despite getting blown out by HOU, this defense has held their opponents to 20 points or less and forced multiple turnovers in every other game this season. They are a top-ten team in rushing yards allowed, and facing an IND offense without Richardson gives me more confidence this week. I'm not saying this is a top-five option, but I don't see Minshew shredding this defense for 30 points, making it a safe choice for a handful of points.

3

HOUSTON TEXANS VS NO

Despite last week's disappointing performance, I will consider streaming them against a NO offense that dominated an injured NE defense. I didn't believe anything changed about the NO offense in the bottom ten yards per game, and they failed to surpass 20 points in every game (except last week). Because of this, I'm confident the HOU defense will finish with a top-ten performance. They are above average in points per game, and I believe this is a high-floor option.

4

TAMPA BAY BUCCANEERS VS DET

Coming off the bye week, this defense has held their opponents to under 20 points in three of the last four games. They've also forced multiple turnovers and a sack in every game this season. They have a tough matchup against a top-ten offense in DET, and it is undoubtedly risky to expect a top-12 performance. However, the upside is there, and if they can force turnovers, they should provide more than a few points even if they give up 20+ points. It's not a top option, but beggars can't be choosers.

FOLLOW US @AKAMAIFANTASY

WWW.AKAMAIFANTASYFOOTBALL.COM