

WEEK 11 DEF STREAMERS

LOOKING FOR TEAMS ON LESS THAN 55% OF ROSTERS IN YAHOO

1

SAN FRANCISCO 49ERS @ JAX

Despite having a mediocre season, I like the matchup against the struggling JAX offense that has given up a turnover in each of the last five games. Generating more than one sack in five of the previous six games and coming off a strong performance last week, I believe there's a solid floor for a handful of points with the upside potential.

2

MIAMI DOLPHINS @ NYJ

Coming off back-to-back strong performances generating at least four sacks and multiple turnovers, particularly against a decent BAL offense last week, they will be looking to continue this against one of the league's worst offenses. There's undoubtedly some risk facing a divisional rival; however, the upside for double-digit scoring is too high for me to ignore them on the waiver wire.

GREEN BAY PACKERS @ MIN

After a dominating performance last week, they will be facing a divisional rival that struggles with consistency. Despite being a top 12 defense this season, this isn't a matchup I'm necessarily comfortable with. They could finish with double digits or less than four points. If I've been streaming them already, I'd still consider targeting some of the other options mentioned but won't be too disappointed if I miss out.

CAROLINA PANTHERS VS WAS

Coming off three consecutive games of more than one sack and one turnover, they face a WAS offense that has given up a turnover in at least five of the six games. While this defense has some up and down performances due to their offensive struggles, the return of CMC and Cam Newton will hopefully provide some stability that will help keep the defense off the field the entire game.
