

WEEK 4 DEF STREAMERS

LOOKING FOR TEAMS ON LESS THAN 60% OF ROSTERS IN YAHOO

1

LOS ANGELES CHARGERS @ NYG

They haven't been impressive outside of one game, they have a good matchup against a struggling NYG offense that has failed to score double-digit points in two of their last three games. They have also allowed multiple sacks in every game, whereas this LAC defense has forced multiple sacks every game. Despite Khalil Mack's injury, I remain confident in this defense's ability to continue pressuring the QB and potentially forcing turnovers. While they may not be a top ten option, they are a top-15 high-floor option.

2

HOUSTON TEXANS VS TEN

This defense is considered to be above average; however, it hasn't translated to fantasy football (failing to score double-digits in a game this season). Despite that, they have generated multiple sacks, forced a turnover, and held their opponents to under 20 points in two of their last three games. Now they face a bottom-five offense in total yards per game and points scored per game. Because of the matchup, they are one of the top streaming options, and are a top-15 high-floor option with potential upside.

3

WASHINGTON COMMANDERS @ ATL

Coming off their best performance of the season, they are facing an ATL offense that got shut out last week. While I expect the ATL offense to score double-digit points, I like the WAS defense to continue to generate pressure on the QB, forcing multiple sacks in every game so far. Unfortunately, they haven't forced a turnover yet, which limits their upside to being a low-end top-12 streaming option. I prefer a couple of other teams here, but I will take my chance with this defense if I miss out on them.

4

JACKSONVILLE JAGUARS @ SF

Despite not being a "good" defense, they have been impressive, forcing three turnovers and generating a sack in every game so far. They have also held their opponents to ten points in two games. While they have had good matchups against struggling offenses like HOU, CAR, and an injured CIN, they are facing another injured SF offense. While QB Brock Purdy may return this week and may be their toughest matchup, I'm still optimistic that this defense will continue to make big plays and be a top-12 streaming option.

FOLLOW US @AKAMAIFANTASY

WWW.AKAIMAIFANTASYFOOTBALL.COM