

WEEK 3 DEF STREAMERS

LOOKING FOR TEAMS ON LESS THAN 60% OF ROSTERS IN YAHOO

1

KANSAS CITY CHIEFS @ IND

I must make a disclaimer. This is viable if Michael Pittman is out of this game. Without Pittman, this IND offense is one-dimensional, and this KC defense has been solid against good competition (AZ, LAC). This defense has been above league average against the run and 3rd down conversions while also getting sacks and pressuring QBs. If Pittman is healthy, this becomes riskier, and the floor is much lower.

2

ATLANTA FALCONS @ SEA

Facing an offense that hasn't scored more than 20 points, is bottom five in red zone attempts, and almost got shut out last week. This defense has generated a sack and a turnover in both games and has looked impressive for a defense that's barely on any roster because they're losing. If you're looking for a handful of points, I think they are able to take advantage of this decent matchup.

3

HOUSTON TEXANS @ CHI

I know this looks crazy. But this defense has quietly been a top-12 defense in 3rd down conversions and scoring in the red zone. Facing one of the worse offenses in the league, this is a good matchup for HOU, who was able to hold IND and DEN to under 20 points as well. They generated sacks and a turnover in both games and will not be highly sought after because of the name. This could be a sneaky top-12 play.

4

DALLAS COWBOYS @ NYG

Despite all the attention on the offense, I think the defense has also been impressive, not allowing 20 points in either game against TB and CIN. They have been pressuring the QB and will be facing an offense that has given up eight sacks over the past two games. That's a good opportunity for a turnover or two. I'm not too concerned with Daniel Jones, but hopefully, Saquon Barkley doesn't have a big run that changes this.

FOLLOW US @AKAMAIFANTASY

WWW.AKAMAIFANTASYFOOTBALL.COM