

WEEK 14 WAIVERS

LOOKING FOR PLAYERS ON LESS THAN 50% OF ROSTERS IN YAHOO

1

TYJAE SPEARS (RB) - TEN (7)

I was considering Keaton Mitchell from BAL as I believe he may be the lead option in the committee, but if he's not available in your league, then this guy is not a bad consolation prize. While there's no certainty that Derrick Henry will miss this week, Spears proved he's a capable option when given the opportunity. He's been a decent receiving threat with four catches in three of his last five games and reached 75 rushing yards on 16 attempts.

2

NOAH BROWN (WR) - HOU (7)

With the injury to Tank Dell, this opens up the possibility of more targets for Brown, who's still recovering from injury. His poor performance last week doesn't concern me. I don't know if he will surpass 100 receiving yards again, but the upside of being one of the top two receiving threats in a top-three offense in passing yards and top-ten in points per game. I wouldn't be rostering him, intending to start him immediately, but he's an interesting high-upside stash WR4 with flex potential.

3

JONATHAN MINGO (WR) - CAR (7)

In PPR scoring leagues, he has a couple of decent performances with at least six catches and surpassing 60 receiving yards. While the offense has struggled, he's had at least six targets in four straight games and may be the primary receiving threat in the offense. He doesn't have the upside you would like in standard-scoring leagues and isn't a strong start in half-PPR leagues, either. He hasn't scored a touchdown yet this season, and I don't feel confident he will this season. I wouldn't consider him more than a stash WR5.

4

EZEKIEL ELLIOT (RB) - NE (11)

With the injury to Rhamondre Stevenson, this opens up a starting opportunity for Zeke as a low-upside RB3. He's been worth streaming when he gets double-digit touches and is a capable receiving threat on an offense that will likely be without two of their leading receivers. They're facing a decent PIT defense, so the matchup isn't great, but at this point of the season, finding a starting RB becomes one of the top waiver options despite the lack of upside unless he scored a couple of touchdowns.

FOLLOW US @AKAMAIFANTASY

WWW.AKAMAIFANTASYFOOTBALL.COM