

WEEK 8 WAIVERS

LOOKING FOR PLAYERS ON LESS THAN 50% OF ROSTERS IN YAHOO

1

WAN'DALE ROBINSON - WR (NYG)

With the injuries to Sterling Shepard, Kenny Golladay, and Kadarious Toney, there are opportunities for the rookie WR to become a primary receiving threat every week. Leading the team in targets last week (8) and scoring a touchdown in his debut the week prior, he's an interesting speculative WR4 with flex potential in PPR scoring leagues. I wouldn't start him unless it's a bye-week filler, but he is worth adding in larger leagues.

2

ISAIAH MCKENZIE - WR (BUF)

Coming off a bye week, he hasn't looked healthy since returning from injury in Week 6. With Jamison Crowder on IR, this opens up an opportunity for McKenzie to take over the WR3 role within one of the best offenses in the league. He's a bench stash that may blossom in a week or two if he can return to form. He's certainly risky with all the competition for targets within the offense, but he could be a solid bye-week flex filler in PPR leagues.

3

RACHAAD WHITE - RB (TB)

He's been a solid handcuff providing some value as a handcuff behind Leonard Fournette, averaging a handful of carries over the past three games. He hasn't surpassed 50 all-purpose yards in three straight games. With the offense struggling, they could look to give more opportunities to White, but he appears to be a bench stash comparable to Alexander Mattison.

4

JUSTIN FIELDS - QB (CHI)

Part of the waiver wire process is looking beyond this week, and if you need a multi-week streaming candidate, then you are in luck. Fields has flashed some potential, throwing a touchdown in three consecutive games while running for at least 80 yards in the last two on double-digit rushing attempts. Facing MIA, DET, and ATL after this week could be the start of a top-12 QB.

FOLLOW US @AKAMAIFANTASY

WWW.AKAMAIFANTASYFOOTBALL.COM