

WEEK 14 WAIVERS

LOOKING FOR PLAYERS ON LESS THAN 45% OF ROSTERS IN YAHOO

1

DONTA FOREMAN - RB (TEN)

I understand that he's splitting carries with Hilliard, but he's been the lead back in a TEN offense committed to running the ball. He doesn't have the highest upside but is worth rostering, and a decent spot start in good matchups. I'll take a shot on an RB that will get 14-20 touches a game at this point of the season. Even if McNichols returns from injury, that will affect Hilliard's role.

MARQUEZ VALDES-SCANTLING - WR (GB)

Coming off two games with at least nine targets, he has been a boom or bust flex option. Facing an injured CHI defense, I wouldn't be surprised if he could connect on a deep shot or two. He will have a higher floor with more than two points with the targets, which helps my confidence. I wouldn't be targeting him, but I'll keep him on my watchlist and, depending on my roster, may pick him up for a spot start.

RUSSELL GAGE - WR (ATL)

With Ridley away, this has opened up an opportunity for Gage to become the primary WR target on the roster. With Pitts and Patterson attracting all the attention, Gage has seen at least seven targets in four of five games. He has turned that into at least six catches for 50 yards making him a PPR flex option in most leagues. However, facing a decent CAR defense, I'm not excited to start him this week.

KADARIUS TONEY - WR (NYG)

This is a speculative add meant to be stashed on your bench. With Toney injured for the past couple of games, it's unsure when he will return. However, he has the upside to receive double-digit targets in a game, making him a WR3 in PPR scoring formats. Obviously, there's some risk as the NYG offense is without their starting QB and overall hasn't been impressive.
