

WAIVER ADDS WEEK 7

10/20/2020

These five players should be targeted in most 12 team leagues and are currently rostered in less than 40% of Yahoo leagues.

TIM PATRICK - DEN (5)

With back to back 100+ yard games, he's shown the big play ability to become rosterable. With injuries to Sutton, Fant, and Hamler, he has stepped up in their absence and I believe he has cemented a role within the offense. With Locke returning, I could see him being your last WR on your bench that you can play in good matchups.

COLE BEASLEY - BUF ((11)

In PPR formats, Beasley has been a consistent option with six or more targets in all but one game this season. He has more than 50 receiving yards in four games and touchdowns in the last two. Facing against the Jets, Patriots, and Seahawks, those matchups look appealing enough to pick him up for an emergency flex option.

J.D. MCKISSIC - WAS (8)

Another PPR recommendation, Mckissic finished with another six catches along with his season high in carries. With more than six catches and 40 receiving yards in three weeks, he's another emergency start going against that vulnerable Dallas defense. As a Gibson fan, this situation annoys me, but I cannot ignore the obvious committee.

KEELAN COLE - JAX (8)

Despite talking about Shenault last week, I'm saying Cole can provide a spot start for your team while navigating through the bye weeks. He's been the highest scoring Jaguar receiver and has scored a TD in three games this season. While his low floor is three catches for 30 yards, coming off a season high nine targets, there's reason to be optimistic.

BOSTON SCOTT - PHI (9)

I'll be honest, I don't like this idea too much. I was close to making this about Trey Burton, but the matchup looks promising and it appears that Sanders will miss the game. While he hasn't been impressive, the opportunity is there and there's a desperate need for playmakers on that offense.
