

UNDER/OVER RATED – TE

2021–2022 SEASON

MARK ANDREWS UNDERRATED

If you followed me last year, he was one of my targeted players, and despite a mediocre season, I haven't lost any confidence in his ability or role within the team. Injuries to the WR core will boost his target share early in the season. Drafted in the mid-rounds, he has a solid floor and upside that I feel is a decent value at his ADP since Pitts (and maybe TJ) are taken ahead.

OVERRATED DALLAS GOEDERT

First, I like Dallas Goedert. This is because Zach Ertz is still on the roster, and people are not pricing in the risk when drafting Goedert before guys like Higbee, Tonyan, or Fant. Goedert will have good games, but I'm not certain he's a weekly starter you'll be happy with. The team added Devonta Smith, and Reagor is still improving, so it's a pass for me.

TYLER HIGBEE UNDERRATED

This may sound crazy, but he's my sixth TE after Andrews and Hockenson. With Everett leaving and Matthew Stafford is the QB, the upside for Higbee is intriguing considering he's taken within the TE10-12 range. With no real 3rd clear receiving option on the team with Reynolds gone, this could be the late-round TE that breaks out this season.

OVERRATED LOGAN THOMAS

Again, I like Logan Thomas. I was begging people to pick him off waivers last season as a great streaming option. Unfortunately, the team still has Mckissic and added Curtis Samuel, which will take away some of that target share last season. Drafted within the top 8 TE, you're betting on the upside, and I believe there are better options out there.

FIND OUR QB/WR/TE OVER/UNDERRATED ON
www.Akamaifantasyfootball.com

FOLLOW US ON TWITTER
@AKAMAIFANTASY

