

WEEK 16 WAIVERS

LOOKING FOR PLAYERS ON LESS THAN 50% OF ROSTERS IN YAHOO

1

NOAH BROWN (WR) - HOU

I had no confidence in him with Stroud being ruled out, and he still performed well as the primary receiving threat within the offense. With Collins also injured, Brown finished with double-digit targets after finishing with seven over the two previous games. It will be hard to trust him once Collins returns, but until then, you have a boom or bust flex option with WR2 upside if he gets the volume. Despite the upside, the lack of a floor concerns me and makes him a last-resort waiver option for a spot start.

DONTAYVION WICKS (WR) - GB

Coming off his best performance this season, here's someone likely available in most leagues. He had at least five targets in three of the last four games and took advantage of Christian Watson's injury. With Jayden Reed banged up, there could be the possibility of more targets for the rookie WR. I don't believe he will be a league-winner, but if you're in desperate need of a PPR flex option, he can get you a handful of points with the potential for more as a speculative add and bench WR5.

ZAMIR WHITE (RB) - LV

There were question marks on how involved he will be filling in for the injured Josh Jacobs. He proceeded to out-touch Ameer Abdullah 20 to 8 and was also involved as a pass catcher with four targets. The favorable game script led to him being the lead guy, but against KC this week, it gives me concern. However, he was also splitting snaps with Brandon Bolden, which lowers his upside. Despite all that, he's worth rostering as a streaming option since we have yet to determine when Jacobs will return.

JERICK MCKINNON (RB) - KC

After an impressive performance last week, he has been a surprise for me. He has scored a touchdown in back-to-back games despite not leading the team in rush attempts or being the sole receiving RB on the team. Despite that, he's worth rostering as a temporary PPR flex option with Pacheco injured. I wouldn't continue to expect him to score every week, but the team utilizes him in the red zone, making him a boom-or-bust option, considering he hasn't surpassed double-digit touches in the past two games.
