

WEEK 6 WAIVERS

LOOKING FOR PLAYERS ON LESS THAN 50% OF ROSTERS IN YAHOO

1

EMARI DEMERCADO (RB) - AZ (14)

Another RB injured means another opportunity. With James Conner expected to miss at least a few games and Keaontay Ingram hurt, Demercado will have a chance to take on the lead role. However, the team also signed Tony Jones, so I wouldn't be surprised if they were to split touches. Because of the uncertainty, I wouldn't drop a significant portion of my FAAB to roster him, but if I lack RB depth, he's someone I'm looking to pick up as a speculative add.

2

CURTIS SAMUEL (WR) - WAS (14)

Besides him or D'onta Foreman, I decided to go with Samuel for the long-term possibility of him being the second option within the offense. Despite being third on the team in targets, he's second in receptions and receiving yards. He's only two catches and 18 yards behind the leader in Terry McLaurin while surpassing 50 receiving yards in four of the last five games. He's also had three games with at least five catches and is a speculative add as a WR5 due to his recent performances.

3

JOSH DOWNS (WR) - IND (11)

I mentioned him before, but considering he hasn't surpassed 15% yet, I'm guessing many of you are not involved in PPR scoring leagues because he's exceeded 50 receiving yards in two of the last three games with a combined 21 targets in that span. In standard scoring, please ignore it, as the consistency isn't there yet, but even in half-PPR leagues, he's a solid flyer to take a shot on to see if he's getting more than a handful of targets consistently as a bye-week flex option.

4

K.J. OSBORN (WR) - MIN (13)

With the injury to Justin Jefferson, this opens up a massive opportunity for him to be a weekly contributor on the offense and potentially a WR3 if he sees the targets. Last week was the first time he had more than three catches, but still hasn't surpassed 50 receiving yards in a game. I expect Hockenson and Addison to be the primary target. Still, if Osborn can generate six to seven targets consistently, he can provide some flex value as a WR4 or bye-week fill-in in PPR scoring leagues.

FOLLOW US @AKAMAIFANTASY

WWW.AKAMAIFANTASYFOOTBALL.COM