

WAIVER ADDS WEEK 16

12/22/2020

These four players should be targeted in most 12 team leagues and are currently rostered in less than 40% of Yahoo leagues.

RASHARD HIGGINS - CLE @ NYJ

Averaging eight targets and scoring two touchdowns over the past three games, he has been a decent WR3/flex option. Facing a subpar NYJ secondary, the opportunity will be there if the passing volume is the same. If you're in a multi flex league where WR3/4 are considered startable, he is a decent spot start option to consider since becoming the #2 receiving threat.

RUSSELL GAGE - ATL @ KC

If Julio Jones is out, he's someone to consider in PPR leagues. Seeing over eight targets per game over the last five, he also has been putting up double digit performances in the past three games. Facing KC, the ATL offense will be forced to keep up if they want to remain competitive in this game. There's not much upside to starting him, but you could do worse.

SALVON AHMED - MIA @ LV

With the uncertainty around the status of Myles Gaskin, Ahmed is a good insurance policy to have. Finishing with over 23 carries for 122 yards and a touchdown last week, he is the clear lead back within this offense. Facing against LV, I'm not afraid of this matchup and will look to place a waiver bid on him in case Gaskin is inactive and you have a RB2 ready to go.

BENNY SNELL JR. - PIT VS IND

Repeating what I said last week, there are no good RB options available under this threshold this week. But if you're desperate for double-digit carries, then this might work out for you. As the lead back against a good IND defense, this is purely a TD dependent RB3 boom or bust option. If Conner returns, then avoid him completely.

