

WEEK 3 DEF STREAMERS

LOOKING FOR TEAMS ON LESS THAN 60% OF ROSTERS IN YAHOO

1

KANSAS CITY CHIEFS VS CHI

The return of Chris Jones has made its impact known after holding JAX to under double-digits and sacking Trevor Lawrence four times. This week, they face CHI at home and should have another strong performance. What separates them from other options is that they have a good matchup in Week 4 against NYJ. Because of these two weeks, I consider them the priority streaming option this week, even though the upside isn't as high as some below this.

JACKSONVILLE JAGUARS VS HOU

After two weeks, they have been impressive, holding their opponents to under 20 points (KC last week) and forcing multiple turnovers and sacks. This week, they face HOU (gave up at least five sacks this season) at home, and I imagine they will continue this trend and finish a top-12 defense with a top-five upside. They also face ATL the following week, which isn't a great matchup but may be worth holding onto.

MIAMI DOLPHINS VS DEN

I understand the defense didn't look great against LAC in Week 1, but I don't believe DEN is the same tier of offense as LAC; therefore, I like the matchup. Last week against NE, they forced multiple turnovers and got four sacks. I project them to repeat that performance this week at home against a DEN offense that looks closer to last season than not. There's a risk here, but it's a solid consolation if you missed out on KC or JAX.

TENNESSEE TITANS @ CLE

If you're feeling risky or if better options are unavailable (like the opposite play), then I would consider this defense as a last-resort option worth starting. This defense is slightly undervalued and has a decent matchup (CLE), considering the loss of Nick Chubb hampering the offense. Sure, their secondary isn't great, but Watson hasn't been either (INT in both games), and I like the upside this defense provides.
