

WEEK 10 WAIVERS

LOOKING FOR PLAYERS ON LESS THAN 45% OF ROSTERS IN YAHOO

1

DEVONTA FREEMAN - RB (BAL) - WK 8 BYE

The injury to Latavius Murray has opened up an opportunity for Freeman to finish as a flex option scoring a TD in consecutive games while also finishing with double-digit carries last week. Facing MIA on Thursday, this is a decent matchup, and there's a good chance that Murray will miss this game as well. So I don't anticipate anything more than a spot start if I'm picking him up.

ELIJAH MOORE - WR (NYJ) - WK 6 BYE

He has looked promising since returning from injury, finishing with at least 60 yards on at least six targets in two out of the past three games. He has shown chemistry with both backup QBs and was targeted by Wilson earlier in the season. I would consider adding him as a speculative add in PPR leagues as a flex option since I don't trust the NYJ offense just yet.

JORDAN HOWARD - RB (PHI) - WK 14 BYE

When news first broke that he was on the active roster, I didn't anticipate him to be more than a goal-line option in a committee. However, coming off a good game where he led the team in carries (17) and finished with three TDs in two games, he has enough volume to be worth considering as a spot start against DEN this week. I would still consider him a boom or bust option, but the floor is not zero points.

PAT FREIERMUTH - TE (PHI) - WK 7 BYE

The injury to Eric Ebron has opened up an opportunity for Pat to finish as a top 12 TE with over six targets a game and three TDs in back-to-back games. He has shown potential and is likely to have an expanded role within the offense even when Ebron returns. I would still consider this a speculative add as there's competition for targets on this team, but still an intriguing secondary option for a pass-heavy offense.
