

WEEK 13 WAIVERS

LOOKING FOR PLAYERS ON LESS THAN 45% OF ROSTERS IN YAHOO

1

CHUBA HUBBARD- WR (CAR) - WK 13 BYE

The season-ending injury to CMC opens up the opportunity for Hubbard to be an RB3/flex option. Unfortunately, Ameer Abdullah has looked capable and will likely be involved in receiving downs which lowers Hubbard's upside. However, I would still consider targeting him despite being on bye this week, as this could be one of the last weeks to get a starting RB for the rest of the season.

2

JAMAAL WILLIAMS - RB (DET) - WK 9 BYE

With Deandre Swift missing some of the game last week, Williams stepped in and played okay, finishing with 83 yds on 20 total touches. He was a capable receiver and will likely take on the workhorse role until Swift returns. While I have no idea if Swift will miss a game or two, with the team eliminated from the playoffs, I can see a scenario where they let Swift sit for an extended period making Williams an RB3.

3

DONTRELL HILLIARD - RB (TEN) - WK 13 BYE

If you missed out on the above two options, this is more of a speculative add as he has emerged as the secondary RB within the offense behind D'onta Foreman. If you choose between the two, I would personally choose Foreman due to his lead role; however, if you have the bench spot, I would stash Hilliard and monitor his play over the next game or two to see if last week's volume was a fluke.

4

A.J. GREEN - WR (ARI) - WK 12 BYE

Enough RBs already. He has been quietly a boom-or-bust flex option that has put up solid games filling in for an injured Deandre Hopkins and with Colt McCoy as the QB. Over the past five games, he has surpassed 50 yards in four of those games. Once Hopkins returns, he will likely lose some volume but is a sneaky start if Hopkins continues to miss games.
