

WEEK 6 WAIVERS

LOOKING FOR PLAYERS ON LESS THAN 45% OF ROSTERS IN YAHOO

1

DEVONTAE BOOKER - RB (NYG) - WK 10 BYE

With the injury to Saquon, Booker finished with an inefficient 42 yards on 16 carries but scored two TDs and caught a few passes. Facing a tough LAR defense next week, I'm not expecting him to be an RB2 most weeks. He's a waiver wire target because he'll likely have the goal-line carries and be the lead back with Freeman utilized on passing downs. Unsure when Saquon will return, I wouldn't break the bank on him.

2

DARREL WILLIAMS - RB (KC) - WK 12 BYE

With CEH injured, Williams finished the game with a handful of carries and targets, sharing passing downs with Mckinnon. It's confirmed that CEH will miss a few weeks, which opens up opportunities for him to be a spot start against decent matchups such as WAS, TEN, and NYG in the next three games. I'm anticipating RB3 value with some upside and a helpful bye-week filler.

3

KADARIUS TONEY - WR (NYG) - WK 10 BYE

After the injury to Daniel Jones, I was hesitant to recommend this pickup. But it's hard to deny the talent he showed in the past two games (267 yards on 16 catches). Injuries to the WR core (Shepard, Golladay, Slayton, Barkley) have opened up opportunities to feature him in the offense. He is an exciting bench stash, while we hope that Daniel Jones will return soon.

4

HUNTER HENRY - TE (NE) - WK 14 BYE

Surprisingly, he is a top 12 TE in most scoring formats and has seen at least five targets in three consecutive games. Despite splitting snaps and targets with Jonnu Smith, Henry has been the more consistent option and will be an excellent bye-week/injury replacement option in what has been another rough year for the overall position.
