

WEEK 11 QB STREAMERS

LOOKING FOR PLAYERS ON LESS THAN 70% OF ROSTERS IN YAHOO

1

JACOBY BRISSETT (AZ) VS SF

He continues to be a great streaming option even against tough matchups like IND and GB. Last week, he was able to salvage his day in garbage time, but four straight games of throwing over 250 yards and two touchdowns while contributing as a rusher is good enough to be a top-12 QB over the last month. Despite the mediocre matchup against a decent SF defense, they have given up over 24 points in their previous three games. Not my top streaming option, but one of the better ones available.

SAM DARNOLD (SEA) @ LAR

It was a tough decision between Rodgers vs a bad CIN defense, but it comes down to believing in the SEA offense more. Despite an awful performance, I did not lose any confidence in streaming him even against a tough matchup this week. This LAR defense ranks in the top five in points allowed per game and controlled their opponents to less than 14 points in three of its last four games. I'm not expecting a top-ten performance, but a top-15 finish isn't unreasonable, given they need to keep up with the LAR offense.

JOE FLACCO (CIN) @ PIT

Coming off the bye week, he has been great over the last month, throwing over 200 yards and multiple touchdowns with top-five upside (300+ yards and 3+ touchdowns) in two of his last three games. One of those games was against this PIT defense, which is in the bottom three in passing yards allowed per game. There's some risk of variance being a divisional matchup, but on the offense with the lowest rushing yards per game, he will have opportunities even as a boom-or-bust top-15 option.

J.J. MCCARTHY (MIN) VS CHI

Barely out of the top 15 last week, his unstable play has been frustrating because the potential is there. Throwing a pick in every game this season, I wonder if he's only streamable against good matchups. Good thing he's facing a CHI defense that's in the bottom ten in passing yards and points allowed per game. There are other options like Tua Tagovailoa, but I still believe in the upside, and the potential for garbage-time stats is there. If you miss out on the above options, he's not a bad last resort.
